Somber dedication for Sept. 11 Museum

Solemn. President Obama spoke about the courage and sacrifice that occurred on 9/11 at the ceremony for the new museum.

President Barack Obama referred to the National September 11 Memorial Museum as, "a sacred place of healing and hope."
GETTY IMAGES

Hundreds of visitors descended seven stories to the base of the National September 11 Memorial Museum on Thursday for the exhibit's dedication ceremony that centered as much around the lives of those lost 13 years ago as it did survivors.

At least 700 individuals were on hand for the commemoration, which began with a children's choir rendition of Stephen Sondheim's "Somewhere" that reverberated from the slurry wall within the expansive Foundation Hall.

Former Mayor Michael Bloomberg was the first to address the crowd, which sat in front of a large concrete slab that showed photos taken on the day of the attack and videos recounting the lives upended thereafter.

The images and sounds of voice mails from worried family members left for victims led many to wipe tears during the ceremony.

"This museum — built on a site of rubble and ruins — is now filled with the faces, the stories and the memories of our common grief and our common hope," Bloomberg said.

Among the sea of faces in the crowd were survivors, family members of those lost in the attack, first responders and various political leaders — including President Barack Obama and wife Michelle, former president Bill Clinton, former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo and New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie.

Obama toured the exhibit before approaching the podium, along with the first lady, the Clintons, Bloomberg and his longtime partner Diana Taylor.

True spirit

"To all those who responded with such courage — on behalf of Michelle and myself and the American people — it is an honor for us to join in your memories, to remember and to reflect. But above all, to reaffirm the true spirit of 9/11 — love, compassion, sacrifice — and to enshrine it forever in the heart of our nation." Obama

The President said that the museum would be a profound and moving experience to those who visit, and it gives an opportunity for people to see the faces of "3,000 innocent souls" who lost their lives in 2001.

"We can touch their names and hear their voices and glimpse the small items that speak to the beauty of their lives — a wedding ring, a dusty helmet, a shining badge," he said. "Here we tell their story, so that generations yet unborn will never forget."

Tony Award-winning singer LaChanze, also punctuated the stories of resiliency and goodwill with a powerful rendition of "Amazing Grace," dedicated to her late husband Calvin Joseph Gooding, a securities trader who was working in the North Tower.

Ahead of the dedication, Paula Grant Berry, who lost her husband David and co-chairs the memorial foundation's program committee said the museum will be a safe place for visitors who might not have the same connection to Sept. 11 that those gathered at the museum do.

"Over time, this exhibition will be open and we won't all be around," she said. "New Yorkers are certainly going to come to this and they're going to bring their own stories. They're going to find their own stories. … I think they'll bring something to it, and I hope this museum will help them in that way."

Heroism

Personal story

While telling of Equities Trader Welles Remy Crowther, 24, who died when the South Tower collapsed after leading survivors down 17 flights of stairs, Obama hugged Welles' mother, Alison Crowther, and Ling Young — one of the people Welles — who, until days after the attack, was only known as the man with the red bandanna — saved.

"It is our greatest hope that when people come here and see Welles' red bandana, they will remember how people helped each other that day, and we hope they will be inspired to do the same in ways both big and small," Alison said.

The annual Dance Parade event takes place this weekend. / GETTY IMAGES

Dance Parade to groove its way down Broadway

Move. Thousands of dancers will participate in the Saturday event.

If you go

The parade begins on 21st Street and Broadway at 1 p.m. Saturday.

- Dancers move down Broadway to a grandstand at Eighth Street and then east to Tompkins Square Park, where a festival will be held from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m.
- Visit www.DanceParade.org.

Get ready to dance, New York.

More than 10,000 dancers will swing, tap and pirouette their way down Broadway this Saturday as part of the Eighth Annual Dance Parade and Festival.

Organizers said this year's theme, "Be the Momentum," aims to celebrate a shared love of dance.

"There's an expression, 'if it feels good, do it,' and dance feels good," the parade's executive director, Greg Miller, said in a statement. "You can see that in all the smiling faces from one culture to the next."

From ancient to modern, more than 77 dance styles and cultures will be represented during the parade.

Politics. Rob Astorino accepts the GOP nomination for NY governor

It's official: Republican gubernatorial candidate Rob Astorino is the GOP's candidate to run against Gov. Andrew Cuomo.

The sitting Westchester County Executive accepted the nomination at the New York State Republican Convention in Rye Brook on Thursday, promising to not rest until New York gets "back on track" toward being a "great state."

He blamed Cuomo's administration for municipalities "buckling under the weight of his mandates" and blaming it on local governments.

Rob Astorino / FACEBOOK

"New York government grew so wide, so fast and so broad that it had to tax its people into the ground to support itself. And when Albany couldn't tax us any more, it began making local governments do it for them," Astorino said.

Along with his running mate, Chemung County Sheriff Christopher Moss, Astorino vowed to cut taxes and regulations and to repeal gun reform laws passed by the state in 2013 that he called an "unconstitutional political gimmick."

Transit. Metro-North announces reforms to improve train safety

Metro-North announced on Thursday a series of reforms the railroad is undertaking to improve safety after several serious incidents in the last year and a federal review of operating practices.

The review, conducted over the winter following a deadly train derailment in December, found a "poor safety culture" at the railroad.

Metro-North said a work plan has been established to address each of the actions identified in the review.

The railroad is conducting outreach to employees and reorganizing the Safety Department.

Initiatives also include reductions in the maximum authorized speeds, ensuring no Metro-North locations require speed reductions of more than 20 miles per hour, as well as outfitting more of the railcar fleet with "Alerters" to keep train engineers responsive. ANNA SANDERS

SORRY, I'M BOOKED

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN

TOM FOREMAN IS A POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN.

My house has books on tables, on shelves and next to the bed. Books slide across the kitchen counter, cascade down the stairs and tumble from closets. My wife says I collect books faster than I read them and for no good reason, but I think she's just jealous of my immense knowledge.

That said, as I assemble my summer reading list, here are some books I would dearly love to see on the racks.

"On Second Thought, No Comment," by Donald Sterling. The former businessman, raconteur and master of human relations shares his formula for balancing business, basketball and family life in a world where, "Dammit, no one understands me!"

"Don't Count Those Chickens," by Hillary Clinton. How do you fail to win the White House when millions of people are practically lining up to give you the victory? "I don't know, but I did it before!" the former Secretary of State says. Two thumbs up!

"Same Act – Different Year!" by John Boehner. The irrepressible "Orange Man" of Capitol Hill passes on his keys to scaring women, young people and immigrants, yet still acting puzzled when voters have trouble warming up to your party.

"Congress? Who Needs It?" by Barack Obama. He's a much admired president, except among more than half the population that, like McKayla, is not impressed. But readers will be thrilled by his daring escapades, as he tells the rest of elected government "Head to the showers. I've got this!"

"Joe's Big Backyard BBQ," by Joe Biden. As a vice president whose own party is hardly interested in seeing him as a candidate, the always cheerful Joe has spent his time working up some great recipes for burgers, ribs and pork, all slathered in his tangy secret sauce.

I'd buy these books. But I'm sure instead D.C. politicos will turn out more volumes on how to restore our democracy, revitalize the economy and make government work. And I'm just not in the mood for more comedy right now.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author.

Ex-NFL star charged in double murder

Former National Football League star Aaron Hernandez has been charged with murder in connection with the July 2012 shooting of two men in Boston, Suffolk County District Attorney Daniel Conley said on Thursday.

Conley said that Hernandez used a handgun to "ambush and execute" Daniel Abreu and Safiro Furtado, two Cape Verdean nationals, after they had a chance meeting at a Boston night club and were driving home on July 16, 2012. REUTERS

Don't panic. You can take steps to help stop your hair from turning white.

Gray matter

You can't stop your hair from losing its color, but you can delay the process. / CREATAS

Eventually, most of us will develop canities — the technical term for going gray. The bad news is that there's no proven way to reverse the condition. The good news, as most of us probably know, is that it isn't life or even health-threatening — just a little demoralizing. Canities can affect 20-somethings, but it usually kicks in around middle age. Some people retain most of their hair's color into their 60s. Technically, hair doesn't turn gray; it turns white. But as it does, it reflects nearby coloring and appears gray.

"Each of the 100,000-150,000 hairs on our scalp are on independent growth cycles," says Dr. Robert Dorin, a family practice doctor and member of The International Society of Hair Restoration Surgery. "As our hair shafts elongate, special cells called melanocytes produce hair pigment and deposit it in the hair cells. As we age, the specialized cells that constantly resupply new melanocytes, called melanocyte stem cells, begin to slow down."

So, with aging, or interruption in melanocyte production due to illness, the amount of pigment distributed through the hair becomes more sparse. The rate of natural hair color change is mostly due to genetics, says Dorin, but maintaining good health plays a huge part, too.

"Hormone levels, stress, lifestyle, environmental pollutants and toxins can affect hair pigment production," he adds. Even natural body chemicals affect it. "Recently in a study done in Europe, scientists found that a buildup of hydrogen peroxide from the hair cells' biological process contributed to graying hair."

Quoted

"Hormone levels, stress, lifestyle, environmental pollutants and toxins can affect hair pigment production."

Dr. Robert Dorin

Tips

Keep your color

As yet, there's no proof that graying can be reversed, but slowing down the process is possible, says Dorin. His tips for maintaining natural hair color sound familiar: They are the same for maintaining general good health.

1 Stop smoking and limit alcohol intake: "These inhibit your body's ability to fight the processes of aging and create free radicals that destroy cellular function."

2 Exercise: "Consistent, moderate exercise helps your body's defense system to maximize its ability to slow aging and to prevent loss of cellular function at the molecular level."

3 Eat a well-balanced diet: "Eat a 'rainbow' of fruits and vegetables to ensure you consume plant-derived antioxidants. Drink green tea. Juice at home, especially with organically grown veggies. This is a fabulous way to get high nutritional value antioxidants into your system."

One last piece of wedding advice: Do NOT be these guys!
RICHARD CARTWRIGHT, NEW LINE CINEMA

Etiquette. Wedding season is in full bloom, and serial guest Jen Doll wants you to learn from her mistakes.

Before you spend money on a dress you'll never wear again, before you scroll down the list of wedding registry gifts just looking for something in your price range, and before you weed through your list of Facebook friends for someone hot enough you can ask to be your date (without it being too weird), read these tips from Jen Doll, author of "Save the Date." She's been to more than her fair share of weddings, has seen it all and is here to save you from any wedding guest mortification you are unknowingly setting yourself up for.

Don't bring a date just so you're not alone

There are definitely times when you should bring a date to a wedding, like when you're married or dating someone your friends like having around. But there are times when it's better to go solo, even when you'd rather not. "If you're going to be seeing a lot of old friends and it's like a reunion, it might be best to go alone," Doll explains. You don't want to be stuck explaining who every person you name-drop is to your date, who will probably be bored anyway. "Also, if you just started dating someone new, it's best to go by yourself," she says. "You don't want to push a new relationship and make it seem more real than it is."

Another time when it's best not to bring a date: right after a breakup. "It can be scary to go alone, but use that time to do something nice for yourself," Doll says. Get a blowout. If it's a destination wedding, stay a little longer. Use the wedding as an excuse to indulge.

Open bar no-no

Don't do shots

The open bar isn't going to shut down, so there's no need to start the day with tequila shots. When it comes to boozing it up at a wedding, take it slow. Doll has a whole section in her book devoted to the dangers of the open bar, so learn from her mistakes.

Don't make out with the bride's relatives

"If you're single, you can flirt or make out with anyone you are attracted to who is also single ... as long as they aren't a relative of the bride," she says. Learn from Doll, who has seen her fair share of disastrous wedding hook-ups — and had some of her own. "The price is too great, with the awkwardness and potential apologies waiting to be made," she warns.

Director Gareth Edwards puts horrible beasts in the background of shots throughout "Godzilla." / WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Welcome back, trodder

Monster reboot. Godzilla returns, only he's serious, and his co-star is Juliette Binoche.

These are times when we prefer our cultural junk gloomy and realistic. Even "Leprechaun" is getting a "dark" reboot. But it makes sense for Godzilla. The 1954 original is brutal and brooding, not campy like the film versions that followed. Despite being so serious in tone, the new one doesn't have the drive of the first, which symbolically exorcised then-recent demons of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

But even if there's no burning reason it needs to exist, this "Godzilla" at least has craft. It's sometimes disarming how adept it is at doing something atypical. It's an origin story, following the paths of a pair of winged behemoths, as well as the title megareptile himself, who decide to use the planet as their battleground.

Its focus is tight, even narrow, sometimes to a fault. Its characters aren't interesting, despite an overqualified cast that includes Bryan Cranston, Sally Hawkins and Juliette Binoche.

But this is, by design, a detached blockbuster: The cameras keep us far from the action, denying us clear shots of its creatures, and even cuts away from fights when they start getting big. Just stick with it, because it does, eventually, deliver the monster-fighting goods.

Sports saga. Jon Hamm's baseball movie is certainly not another 'Bull Durham'

"Million Dollar Arm" tells of how Dinesh Patel and Rinku Singh, two kids from India, were found after an exhaustive search and installed in the MLB. It's an interesting true story, if perhaps not worthy of an entire movie. And so the film attaches a more formulaic storyline: that of a workaholic — in this case sports agent J.B. Bernstein (Jon Hamm) — who learns to chill out, care about people with whom he's not doing business and not exclusively bang shallow models.

There's only one way this is going to go, and that's not a bad thing; films like this are essentially comfort food. But the script so heavily favors J.B.'s tale that all else falls by the wayside. That includes Patel and Singh (Madhur Mittal and Suraj Sharma), as well as excitable aspiring coach Amit (Pitobash). Ostensibly the focus of the story, they get one personality tic each. They're even reduced to those dumb jokes about rural types not understanding the basics of "civilized" culture, like how one doesn't go up the down escalator. Good thing Lake Bell is there.

As Hamm's love interest, she brings an unusual, fun energy to a film that needs as much personality as it can get. MATT PRIGGE

Joaquin Phoenix and Marion Cotillard try to eke out a life in 1920s New York in James Gray's "The Immigrant." / THE WEINSTEIN COMPANY

Coming to America

Old New York. Marion Cotillard runs afoul of Joaquin Phoenix in the retro "The Immigrant."

James Gray is a classicist whose fondness for old movies — particularly old melodramas — is palpable in every frame of his films. In "We Own the Night" and "Two Lovers," he doesn't just bring old styles to the modern day. He behaves as if certain cinematic styles have never gone out of practice, because they never should have. His latest, "The Immigrant," is truly old-fashioned; it's set in 1921, and it depicts the rocky experience of those who came into our country in less pleasant times than would greet them now.

Indeed, few had it as bad as Marion Cotillard's Ewa, a Polish Catholic woman whose misfortunes start when her sick sister is turned away at Ellis Island. Ewa seems to luck out when she befriends Bruno (Joaquin Phoenix), a dapper stranger who says he can ferry her out to Manhattan. Alas, he's a dangerous pimp who ropes her into his trade, then allows her to wield some management power. She seems to find another savior in Emil (Jeremy Renner), a kindly low-rent magician, but might she just be terminally gullible?

Melodramas get a bad rap, depicted by detractors as broad and shameless. But the best — and even some of the merely pretty good — deliver nuanced characterizations and performances. All three leads gradually reveal surprising details and shifts in personality. Bruno's terror proves to be at least somewhat of a front; as in other Gray films, Phoenix's character is a wounded child playing dress-up. Ewa herself winds up more confident and even ambitious than the sad-eyed victim we meet at the start of the film.

Gray is one of the movie's stars, too, in a way. His images are weighted with purpose, inspiring fascination with the world they create and the actors they show. The cinematography by Darius Khondji ("Seven") has the old-world mustiness of classic paintings. The sets are evocative of time and place — Gray is one of the great chroniclers of New York 'hoods that too rarely are showcased onscreen — but it's the faces that haunt the most. Gray loves close-ups of faces one can stare at for hours — the faces that betray feelings better than words ever can. He understands more than most that the close-up is one of cinema's strongest powers, and he's hired three actors whose mugs are not only iconic but relentlessly human.

Godzilla vs. the time monster

Evolution of a beast. There are more than two dozen official Godzilla films — that is, ones put out by Japan's Toho Company, LTD. There is also a smattering of semi- or even non-official ones, including the American reboot out this weekend. Godzilla has largely stayed the same, with the occasional minor — and not-so-minor — variations. Here he is through his 60 years. MATT PRIGGE

The original, mean one

Only a handful of times have filmmakers portrayed Godzilla realistically, seriously considering the impact a rampaging colossus would have on humanity. Indeed, it started out doing just that, in 1954. He wasn't just a fun toy concept; he was borne out of the pain of WWII, reflecting the anxieties that came from the Nuclear Age. The American version softened the blow, making it fun and adding Raymond Burr as a journalist.

The nice-ish one

For his first four outings, Godzilla was a menace. By the fifth, 1964's "Ghidorah, the Three-Headed Monster," he had chilled out into a mere anti-hero, who usually battles or teams up with the likes of Rodan, Mothra (pictured) and Hedorah (aka the Smog Monster). He even had a cute kid: Minilla. In these, the hulking, fat behemoth became a leaner fighting machine. The good times ran through 1975's "The Terror of Mechagodzilla." Twenty-one years is not a bad run.

The one that meets Bambi

Godzilla's influence quickly ran through the globe. In 1969 he was even one of the subjects of a classic amateur film. Marv Newland's "Bambi Meets Godzilla" runs only a minute and a half, the majority of which shows a hand-drawn Bambi hanging in a field while its maker's name occupies every single credit. The meeting, when it comes, goes about as expected. (There are two sequels, but neither was created by Newland.)

The sketch comedy one

Having made waves (sorry) with "Jaws" jokes, "Saturday Night Live" milked Godzilla for yuks at least twice: as a guest of Baba Wawa (pictured) and in a spoof called "Kramer Vs. Godzilla." "SCTV" got in on it too, disguising him as "Grogan" and giving him fangs that zigzagged across his mouth. Voiced by John Candy, he was a more mild-mannered, thoughtful titan, who relaxed while being lightly grilled on a chat show.

The North Korean one

So this happened: Kim Jong-Il, when he was merely the son of the ruler of North Korea, really liked Godzilla. He forced Shin Sang-ok, a South Korean director he had kidnapped, to take a break from propaganda films to make a Godzilla rip-off. The result was 1985's "Pulgasari," in which a giant lizard-like monster who eats metal fights a feudal-era king who runs his land with an iron fist, and which is definitely nothing like North Korea.

The 1998 one

It's amazing that it took more than 40 years for Hollywood to make its own Godzilla picture. The man for the job seemed to be Roland Emmerich, hot off the populist neo-disaster picture "Independence Day." Unfortunately, Roland Emmerich is terrible, and his mega-sized "Godzilla" took things either too lightly or too seriously, and featured thin-skinned digs at Siskel and Ebert. The latter, in his 1½ star review, complained that he wasn't even stomped on.

Drum beats and dance

BAM. This year, DanceAfrica focuses on the culture of Madagascar.

African spirit comes alive at DanceAfrica, which starts Sunday. DINO PERRUCCI

The snap of a finger on a djembe drum starts the beat of DanceAfrica's 37th annual festival, which begins May 18. The opening ceremony, led by founder Chuck Davis, previews the dance, music, art and film to come during the week-long celebration.

Established in 1977, DanceAfrica sought to heighten awareness of African culture and counter the stereotypes of Africans in the media. The response by the local community was immediate. What began as single performance at the Lepercq Space at the Brooklyn Academy of Music quickly grew into a multi-day affair with an ever-expanding résumé of performers from around the world.

"We began with only local companies," Davis recalls. "Now we are international. As we have grown, so has our audience."

This year, DanceAfrica focuses on the music and culture of Madagascar. Joining four performances of Malagasy dance and music are art exhibitions, lectures, dance workshops, DJ parties, film showings, a children's village and a bazaar with 200 vendors selling crafts, food and fashion.

Musically, New York offers its best to a show by Bakomanga; students come from Brooklyn's Asase Yaa arts school and Buffalo's AACC Dance & Drum Performance Company. Other highlights are folk/blues guitarist Madagascar Slim, vocalist Hanitrarivo Rasoanaivo and the BAM/Restoration DanceAfrica Ensemble.

DanceAfrica pays tribute to the visual arts through Nigerian Nnenna Okore, known for her organic wall sculptures built from found materials. Sunday afternoon, she demonstrates her sculptural process with BAM Visual Art curator Holly Shen Chaves at the Fisher Hillman Studio. Okore will also unveil a new sculpture.

But it's the attendees themselves who reflect the fest's main goal: a commitment to preserving African heritage. "DanceAfrica is a celebration for everyone," Davis says.

Horoscope

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Don't be caught short by an unexpected bill. Frivolous spending will cause added worry and stress.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. You may find that you are on a different wavelength than your colleagues. Re-establish your position by sharing ideas and being open to suggestions.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. You will discover a job opportunity today. More money will come your way if you are open to new horizons and a chance to expand your skills.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Don't let your flair for drama go to waste. Channel your energy in an artistic direction.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Romance is in the air. New experiences will open your eyes to exciting possibilities. Your current relationship may be losing its spark.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. A humanitarian cause will attract you. Your diplomacy will be useful in regard to a friend's dilemma. Your ability to be objective will help you find solutions.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. A social or sporting event will put you in the limelight. You are a strong competitor, and you'll wear out the opposition.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. If you're not ready to face up to unpleasantness, remove yourself from the situation. You can't hide forever, but you can buy time.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Turn a profit by making a prudent financial choice. Keep an eye out for opportunities. Learn investment policies.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. If you're feeling stifled intellectually, do something about it. Turn your focus to outside activities.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Don't choose to leave your job without having another one lined up. Difficulties with your employer will arise over boundaries.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Use your energy wisely. An intense romantic encounter will boost your confidence. Follow a hunch, and you'll find success. Improve your profile and increase your circle. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Salmoning is safer for cyclists

I hate to disappoint all of you who try to hate on Alec Baldwin, but it's much SAFER and smarter for a bicyclist to ride AGAINST traffic, regardless of what our chauffeur-driven-in-an SUV politicians say. Would you rather your opponent always be BEHIND you or in FRONT of you? And all the cyclists who died from being "doored" would be alive if only they had been riding against traffic. And any honest adult admits the "disorderly conduct" charge is a scam by cops to use against anyone they don't like. Creating a crowd equals disorderly conduct? Then all cops are guilty of it every time they do their jobs.
JACK DICKENSON, VIA EMAIL

Would Dems be OK with the IRS on their backs?

The politicization of the IRS and other government agencies since Obama took office is unprecedented in U.S. history, and quite frankly, it's dangerous for our democracy. I ask this of those on the left who are opposed to conservatives and therefore don't care what the IRS is doing: When the Republicans are back in power, will you be OK with this?

Rangers renewing rivalry

NHL playoffs. The two Original Six teams, who haven't met in the playoffs since 1996, fight for a Cup berth.

P.K. Subban, who has had a tremendous postseason, will renew his rivalry with Mats Zuccarello and the Rangers in the Eastern Conference finals. / GETTY IMAGES

Derick Brassard looked like a kid on Christmas morning Thursday.

This was a man — and, a team — that appeared ready for the challenge that awaits them in the Eastern Conference finals in the form of the Canadiens.

"We're pretty excited," Brassard said following an optional skate at the Rangers' facility in Greenburgh, New York. "We know we're in a really good position. We're facing a really good team. Obviously when you're in the [final] four you're not going to face. … It's not going to be any easier. We're excited."

Game 1 of the Eastern Conference finals is set for Saturday (1 p.m., NBC) at the Bell Centre in Montreal. This series will mark the 15th time the Rangers and Canadiens have met in the playoffs. The teams are 7-7 in the previous 14 all-time meetings, with the Rangers having won the last series, a six-game Eastern Conference quarterfinals matchup in 1996.

The Canadiens have given Henrik Lundqvist fits throughout his career, as he is 13-11-2 with an .897 save percentage and 2.85 goals against average in 27 career games. He is 4-6-2 all-time at Bell Centre, and last played there Jan. 15, 2012.

"It's so long ago since I played there, so I don't really remember," Lundqvist said about playing at Bell Centre, in between laughs. "I look forward to playing there. It's a conference final; it's in Montreal. That's special, and I'm excited about that. And when it comes to my game, I just try to go out and play the same way. Don't overthink it, enjoy it. ... We're going up there, sticking together, believing that we can do it."

Pierce, Garnett skip speaking after season

No one knows if Kevin Garnett will be gone from Brooklyn next season, but he was missing from cleanout day.

Garnett also refused to speak to the media after the team's season-ending loss Wednesday. He is under contract for one more season.

His former Celtics teammate, Paul Pierce, who is a free agent, also passed on speaking with the media Thursday, though he said he "hadn't given much thought" to his future after Game 5. ESPN reports he may rejoin Doc Rivers with the Clippers. METRO
